Meet the young, genius inventor Leonardo Da Vinci and his best friends, Lorenzo and Lisa, as they embark on a wild and exciting adventure in Leo Da Vinci: Mission Mona Lisa, coming to theaters August 2.

From flying cars, treasure maps, pirates, and sailing ships, it's a family adventure everyone will love!

This new take on the inventor's life is summarized as follows:

“ Life is idyllic in the quiet town of Vinci. The young genius inventor, Leo da Vinci, is continuously tinkering and testing his inventions while his best friends, Lorenzo and Lisa, help but keep a healthy sense of humor as he shoots for the impossible. On their return from an outing to a nearby lake, the trio has a shocking surprise: Lisa's family home has mysteriously burst into flames and, to make matters worse, the odious landlord is demanding that her father repay his debts in full — or agree to have Lisa marry his despicable son. Determined to raise the money Lisa needs, Leo takes his paintings and heads with Lorenzo and Lisa to the nearest big city, Florence, to either sell them or try to get work from a local master. In the town center, they happen upon a mysterious storyteller who not only tells a tale of hidden treasure but has a one-of-a-kind treasure map that he is willing to sell. Could this be the solution to Lisa's troubles?

Leo Da Vinci: Mission Mona Lisa brings many familiar voices to the characters including Power Rangers' Johnny Yong Bosch as Leo, Sailor Moon's Cherami Leigh (Digimon, Dragon Ball) as Lisa, Miraculous: Tales of Ladybug & Cat Noir's Bryce Papenbrook as Lorenzo, Penguin Highway's Landen Beattie as Niccolò, and newcomer Faith Graham voicing Agnes.

Join the adventure with Leo, Lorenzo, and Lisa on August 2 when Leo Da Vinci: Mission Mona Lisa hits the theaters. Find a theater near you.

Every one remembers these trips to the movies with the whole family: the popcorn, the buckets of soda, the snacks. Little eyes look up in awe at the thrills and spills of their pint-sized heroes on the big screen, and when their older those eyes never forget the memories of great times with all the family.

Even better, "Leo Da Vinci: Mission Mona Lisa" adds a touch of history by bringing this innovative genius to life - in child-style.

Young Leonardo (Leo, voiced by renowned voice actor Johnny Yong Bosch of the "Mighty Morphin Power Rangers", "Digimon", "Akira", "Sailor Moon", "DC Super Friends") has all the characteristics of both a real-life legend and a cartoon hero: his clever inventions and razor-sharp wit impress all ages while his bravery and daring keep us on the edge of our seats.

Lisa (aka Mona Lisa, voiced by "Sailor Moon" and "Funimation, Bang Zoom!" Cherami Leigh) is not the quiet, enigmatic wallflower history suggests, but a sparkling, intelligent, and feisty young lady who injects all the laughs and adds her own dash of courage.

With sinister pirates and enough thrills and spills to keep our hearts racing, "Leo Da Vinci" is reminiscent of everyone's favorites like "The Goonies," "Peter Pan" and "How To Train Your Dragon."

On face value, the animated film has all the traditional ingredients of the fairy-tale genre: an evil landlord, a damsel in distress, a romantic hero.

But there's nothing old-fashioned or sexist about the values conveyed in this film.

Lisa is traditionally beautiful, but what drives her on her quest is a heroic desire to save her father rather than a flimsy notion of love. Wit and imagination are celebrated as qualities that help you survive as Leo's clever inventions, like his flying car, take on a life of their own. Other children, best friend Lorenzo (voiced by Bryce Papenbrook of "Miraculous: Tales of Ladybug & Cat Noir", "LEGO Friends: The Power of Friendship"), street orphan Agnes (voiced by "Moms Anonymous" newcomer Faith Graham) and little Niccolò (voiced by Landen Beattie of "Terra Willy"/"Astro Kid"), also use their super-brains to help our heroes evade the adults, who ooze foolishness and cruelty in equal measure.

A timeless family classic

With high-octane chases and a strong moral purpose, "Leo Da Vinci: Mission Mona Lisa" has all the elements of a timeless family classic. Hunting for treasure and racing against evil pirates will satisfy the thirst of the most action-mad youngsters, while the side-splitting laughs from Leo's two friends will keep everyone entertained.

Watch as one of the celebrated masters of our cultural history is brought to life on screen, inspiring ambition and creativity in young minds with unparalleled excitement.

Our hero is both clever and clumsy, overwhelmed by his love for Lisa and driven selflessly to risk everything he has in order to save both Lisa and her father.

Every child in this movie is a hero

Every child in this movie is a hero, outwitting, and out-maneuvering the hapless adults at every turn. "Leo Da Vinci: Mission Mona Lisa" reminds us of our own childhoods, rampaging outside with adventure around every corner, not sitting at home staring at a screen like many kids today. It underpins the traditional values we all want for our children: the importance of friendship, family, courage, and love.

importance of friendship, family, courage, and love.

The movie underpins the importance of friendship, family, bravery, and love

At less than $35 for a family of four, you can't beat going to the movies for value for money and memories to last a lifetime. There are no other family activities that offer as much for so little. "Leo da Vinci: Mission Mona Lisa" will keep the whole family entertained, inspire children and instill wholesome family values from the magic of the big screen. Inventor adventure celebrates STEM pursuits; some peril.

"Leo da Vinci: Mission Mona Lisa" is an animated adventure that portrays the famous painter and inventor as a young adult. Da Vinci (voiced by Johnny Yong Bosch) uses his genius to help his crush get money after her family's farm is destroyed (their romance, including a kiss, is part of the story). Because this is a historical piece, young children may not understand that such contraptions as a cart that moves itself, a primitive plane, a parachute and an underwater breathing apparatus were revolutionary for the time — but the idea that STEM inventions are fun/cool/smart is clear. The movie also serves as an introduction to some of da Vinci's most famous artworks: the Mona Lisa and Vitruvian Man (without the nudity). Although there's no actual violence, peril is frequent, and the scare factor from sharks, sword-wielding (and evil-laughing) pirates and creepy sunken ships could worry younger or more sensitive kids. But tension is always quickly broken, sometimes with a quick musical number. One moment that may need a "don't try this at home" warning: A pirate extinguishes a large match by sticking it in his mouth and exhaling a billow of smoke. (85 minutes)

Leo's ingenious inventions, Lisa's brilliant ideas, Lorenzo's loyalty and Niccolò and Agnes' clever input swirl into an exciting crescendo. Does the treasure exist? Will they be able to evade the pirates? Will Lisa's father be saved? It's a race to the finish, in this story of courage, bravery and friendship: LEO DA VINCI: MISSION MONA LISA.

"Leo Da Vinci: Mission Mona Lisa is a story of courage, bravery, friendship and above all, allowing the strength of youth to shine. Masterfully animated, we see these diverse young characters become heroes, all the while staying true to themselves. It's a wonderful message, one which I am incredibly proud to bring to American families in theaters this summer." ~ Arman Oner, CEO Ammo Content (Distributor).

Directed by Sergio Manfio with Original Story & Screenplay by Francesco Manfio and Sergio Manfio, Leo Da Vinci: Mission Mona Lisa is produced by Gruppo Alcuni and distributed by Ammo Content. The team also includes: Executive Producer - Frances Manfio, Production Manager - Patrizia Calzetta, Character Designer & Animation Supervisor - Anna Stinfale, Original Soundtrack Composed & Orchestrated by Marco Fedalto, Film Editor & Assistant Director - Umberto Barison, Sets Designer & Lighting Coordinator - Marco Pegoraro, Previz Artist & Design Consultant - Mauro Lovadina, Props Designer & Supervisor - Christian Trivellone, with Production Coordinator - Fabio Testa.

Leo has to catch his breath — he can't lose Lisa, especially not like this.

Determined to raise the money Lisa needs, Leo takes his paintings and heads with Lorenzo and Lisa to the nearest big city, Florence, to either sell them or try to get work from a local master. In the town center, they happen upon a mysterious storyteller who not only tells a tale of hidden treasure but has a one-of-a-kind treasure map that he is willing to sell. Could this be the solution to Lisa's troubles?

During their quest for the treasure, Lisa, Lorenzo and Leo are helped by a little girl, Agnes (voice of Faith Graham), a fearless and resourceful street orphan, and Niccolò (voice of Landen Beattie), a little Polish boy who has taught himself all there is to know about the stars and constellations.

Soon, our young heroes realize that they are not the only ones on this quest — a group of sinister pirates follows their every move with the intent of stealing the treasure for themselves.

Leo's ingenious inventions, Lisa's brilliant ideas, Lorenzo's loyalty and Niccolò and Agnes' clever input swirl into an exciting crescendo. Does the treasure exist? Will they be able to evade the pirates? Will Lisa's father be saved? It's a race to the finish, in this story of courage, bravery, and friendship: LEO DA VINCI: MISSION MONA LISA.

Leo Da Vinci: Mission Mona Lisa Review

By David Duprey — On Jul 3, 2019

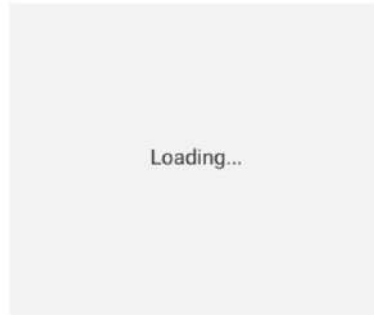

Leo Da Vinci: Mission Mona Lisa, 2019 © Gruppo Alconi

Leo Da Vinci: Mission Mona Lisa is a 2019 animated film about a young inventor and a mysterious storyteller who comes to town and speaks of a hidden treasure.

To call director Sergio Manfio's newest animated film Leo Da Vinci: Mission Mona Lisa a wee bit anachronistic would be a stretch to say the least, the children's tale about the famous inventor not for a moment based on reality, simply playing upon a few historical names to tell a familiar story. It's meant for kids so that's probably not much of a problem, and at least introduces to them a couple of figures in time that they'll get better acquainted with a little later in their lives. It's a well animated effort with plenty of easy to follow adventures for young eyes to stay interested in with colorful characters, action set pieces, and simple dialogue.

Leonardo Da Vinci is a young lad, a rebellious teen with a reputation for wacky inventions, living in a town that sort of tolerates his efforts. His best friend is Lorenzo, a wide-eyed sidekick who revels in the dangers some of Leo's creations offer, including a vehicle that can drive like car, fly like a plane (sort of), and features add-ons like a pump to let Leo walk under water. It's world-changing stuff but goes unnoticed by the pesky adults who don't give much of a thought to the but goes unnoticed by the pesky adults who don't give much of a thought to the boys. Meanwhile, Leo has a thing for Lisa, a pretty and adventurous girl, who finds her family in trouble when a fire burns their barn and crops. Wanting to help, Leo hears (nefariously of course by a scheming pirate) of a treasure under the sea and with Lisa and a few new friends, including Niccoló (who has brought along his new-fangled telescope) and Agnus, a precocious younger girl, they set out to save the day.

Leo Da Vinci: Mission Mona Lisa isn't trying at all to make much sense, at least historically, the story centered on a treasure hunt more than the impact of some profound inventions. Truthfully, it doesn't much matter that the main character is in fact Leonardo Da Vinci, the story a simple one of early romance and playful adventures. The animation style is very recognizable, sticking to the traditional visuals better known in recent Disney releases, and admittedly, it all looks good, the details impressive enough to make it a step above many lower budget movies of the like riding on the big studio's coattails. Leo and Lisa look like extras in Frozen or Tangled.

Either way, if you can get past the lapses in history, something children's movies in this genre tend to take great dramatic license with, there's enough here to distract the kids for a time. With a scene where a speaker breaks into rap and a song with lyrics wishing for a mobile phone, you get where this is going. It's really not all that inventive considering the sensational source material. An Italian-made film dubbed into English, there's some fun for the little ones and is elevated greatly by a rousing score from Marco Fedalto, helping a lot in giving the whole thing a lot more weight. A slight step above the usual flood of half-hearted cheaply-made children's movies.

Leo Da Vinci: Mission Mona Lisa release on August 2.

Synopsis

A young Leonardo Da Vinci is struggling with his incredible inventions when a mysterious storyteller comes to town and speaks of a hidden treasure. Leo and his friends embark on an unforgettable adventure.

Dove Review

Elements of the real-life Leonardo Da Vinci are woven into a clever fantasy tale about a chase after buried treasure in Leo Da Vinci: Mission Mona Lisa. The real-life Leonardo was a jack of many trades, and the storytellers reference a few of them as pirates who try to turn his immense talents to their profit.

(EST.) MONTHLY VISITS: 151K

(EST.) COVERAGE VIEWS: 932

DOMAIN AUTHORITY: 56

The story takes off when young Leo wants to show off another of his inventions to Lisa, presumably years before he immortalized her in the painting, the Mona Lisa. While he's trying to impress her, a fire levels her family's farm. She blames Leo for her absence and never wants to see him again. Desperate to get back in Lisa's good graces, Leo tries to find a way to help. He uses a diving suit as a means of walking the ocean floor to find buried treasure. He also uses a flying machine—and these were indeed things that he designed in real life, even if he wasn't able to realize them.

Pirates kidnap his friends in an attempt to force Leo to bring them the treasure. So, Leo's task is to rescue his friends, save Lisa's family's farm and navigate a way to a happy ending. It's an adventure illustrated with fantastic animation, a little humor and nothing that would likely cause a parent to wince. As such, it merits the Dove-Approved Seal for All Ages.

The Dove Take:

It's family friendly, fun, and—though not faith-filled—sparks enough imagination that the real-life Da Vinci might have been proud to be animated in such fashion.

Life is idyllic in the quiet town of Vinci. The young genius inventor, Leo da Vinci (voice of Johnny Yong Bosch), is constantly tinkering and testing his inventions while his best friends, Lorenzo (voice of Bryce Papenbrook) and Lisa (voice of Cherami Leigh), help but keep a healthy sense of humor as he shoots for the impossible.

On their return from an outing to a nearby lake, the trio has a shocking surprise: Lisa's family home has mysteriously burst into flames and, to make matters worse, the odious landlord is demanding that her father repay his debts in full – or agree to have Lisa marry his despicable son.

Leo has to catch his breath – he can't lose Lisa, especially not like this.

Leo's ingenious inventions, Lisa's brilliant ideas, Lorenzo's loyalty and Niccolò and Agnes' clever input swirl into an exciting crescendo. Does the treasure exist? Will they be able to evade the pirates? Will Lisa's father be saved? It's a race to the finish, in this story of courage, bravery and friendship: LEO DA VINCI: MISSION MONA LISA.

"Leo Da Vinci: Mission Mona Lisa is a story of courage, bravery, friendship and above all, allowing the strength of youth to shine. Masterfully animated, we see these diverse young characters become heroes, all the while staying true to themselves. It's a wonderful message, one which I am incredibly proud to bring to American families in theaters this summer." – Arman Oner, CEO Ammo Content (Distributor).

Directed by Sergio Manfio with Original Story & Screenplay by Francesco Manfio and Sergio Manfio, Leo Da Vinci: Mission Mona Lisa is produced by Gruppo Alcini and distributed by Ammo Content. The team also includes: Executive Producer – Frances Manfio, Production Manager – Patrizia Calzetta, Character Designer & Animation Supervisor – Anna Stinfale, Original Soundtrack Composed & Orchestrated by Marco Fedalto, Film Editor & Assistant Director – Umberto Barison, Sets Designer & Lighting Coordinator – Marco Pegoraro, Previz Artist & Design Consultant – Mauro Lovadina, Props Designer & Supervisor – Christian Trivellone, with Production Coordinator – Fabio Testa.

Leo Da Vinci: Mission Mona Lisa brings many familiar voices to the characters including Power Ranger's Johnny Yong Bosch as Leo, Sailor Moon's Cherami Leigh (Digimon, Dragon Ball) as Lisa, Miraculous: Tales of Ladybug & Cat Noir's Bryce Papenbrook as Lorenzo, Penguin Highway's Landen Beattie as Niccolò and newcomer Faith Graham voicing Agnes.

Cassandra's Review- A great family movie that had the kids laughing and getting into the adventure. I enjoyed the animation and how well it all comes together. This is clean enough to watch at an afterschool group or would be useful as a DVD for the road.

It was nice to wake up to cooler temperatures this AM. For the past two days we were experiencing a heat wave, with temps. in the high 90's and feeling well over 105 with the heat index added in. Not only was it unhealthy to be outdoors for long, but the girls had no desire to go out even for a few minutes to get out of the house. So, that left them with a lot of "What do we do next?," "I am bored!," etc. Thankfully, I was sent an advance screener for a fun new family-friendly movie arriving in theaters on August 2nd called "Leo Da Vinci: Mission Mona Lisa".

I have to admit, when I first heard the title, I was curious as to what the movie would be about, as I hadn't seen any movie trailers for it. And, when I told my girls about the movie, they both looked at each other, and then at me and said they didn't want to watch an educational movie, as they knew of Leonardo DaVinci and the famous Mona Lisa painting. It wasn't until we all watched the trailer to this Dove-Approved movie that we all agreed that it was definitely a movie we wanted to see. And, to be able to see it before it arrived in theaters was a treat, and really helped to break up the mini heat wave we were experiencing, when all you wanted to do was to lay around in an air conditioned room and/or watch TV or movies indoors.

We watched this movie last night while camping out in the living room for the evening. With popcorn and a cold drink in hand, we settled in to watch this movie. My youngest picked up on the animation and pointed out that it wasn't like you expect with most animated movies. But, as the story began, she, along with the rest of the family got reeled in and we were all hooked right up until the ending credits. Here is more about "Leo Da Vinci: Mission Mona Lisa," which is a must see for families with kids of all ages, when it arrives in theaters on August 2nd...

"Please meet the young, genius inventor Leonardo Da Vinci and his best friends, Lorenzo and Lisa, as they embark on a wild and exciting adventure. From flying cars, treasure maps, pirates, and sailing ships, it's a family adventure everyone will love! In theaters August 2, 2019.

Life is idyllic in the quiet town of Vinci. The young genius inventor, Leo da Vinci (voice of Johnny Yong Bosch), is constantly tinkering and testing his inventions while his best friends Lorenzo (voice of Bryce Papenbrook) and Lisa (voice of Cherami Leigh) help-but keep a healthy sense of humor as he shoots for the impossible. On their return from an outing to a nearby lake, the trio has a shocking surprise: Lisa's family home has mysteriously burst into flames and to make matters worse, the odious landlord is demanding that her father repay his debts in full--or agree to have Lisa marry his despicable son. Leo has to catch his breath-he can't lose Lisa, especially not like this

Determined to raise the money Lisa needs, Leo takes his paintings and heads with Lorenzo and Lisa to the nearest big city, Florence, to either sell them or try to get work from a local master. In the town center, they happen upon a mysterious storyteller who not only tells a tale of hidden treasure but has a one-of-a-kind treasure map that he is willing to sell. Could this be the solution to Lisa's troubles?

During their quest for the treasure, Lisa, Lorenzo, and Leo are helped by a little girl, Agnes (voice of Faith Graham), a fearless and resourceful street orphan, and Niccolò (voice of Landen Beattie), a little Polish boy who has taught himself all there is to know about the stars and constellations. Soon our young heroes realize that they are not the only ones on this quest—a group of sinister pirates follows their every move with the intent of stealing the treasure for themselves. Leo's ingenious inventions, Lisa's brilliant ideas, Lorenzo's loyalty and Niccolò and Agnes' clever input swirl into an exciting crescendo!

Does the treasure exist? Will they be able to evade the pirates? Will Lisa's father be saved? It's a race to the finish, in this story of courage, bravery, and friendship: LEO DA VINCI: MISSION MONA LISA."

Doesn't this look like a fun movie? It really was! As soon as the movie was over, both of my girls were asking when we would be watching it again. This movie has a little of something for both boys and girls to enjoy, including pirates and treasure maps, flying cars, cool inventions, and so much more. It truly is a family adventure, both kids and adults will enjoy watching together. Even though this is not a big-named movie release, it shouldn't be overlooked at it really is a fun, must see movie for summer. We really enjoyed it, and can't wait to watch it in theaters in August, and will definitely be buying it on DVD and Blu-Ray when it is released.

If you are looking for a wholesome family-friendly movie that you can bring the whole family to, and be entertained from start to finish, look no further than Leo Da Vinci: Mission Mona Lisa, arriving in theaters on August 2nd. My girls woke this AM talking about the movie and sharing their favorite parts. They really liked Leo's unique inventions, and how the story had many twists and turns and humor sprinkled throughout it. It has become one of their top summer 2019 movies, and one they will continue to talk about and recommend to friends, for some time to come. So, be sure to mark your calendar for August 2nd, and check out Leo Da Vinci: Mission Mona Lisa when it arrives at a theater near you. A story of courage, bravery, and friendship, Leo Da Vinci: Mission Mona Lisa is an Italian animated feature arriving stateside with indie distributor Ammo Content on August 2nd with a limited nationwide release that includes initial stops at two Central Indiana theaters - Indy's own Republic Georgetown 14 and Shelbyville's Republic Studio 10.

Dubbed into English, Leo Da Vinci: Mission Mona Lisa is centered around a young, ambitious inventor named, you guessed it, Leo Da Vinci (voiced by Power Ranger Johnny Yong Bosch), whose continuous testing of and tinkering with his inventions mostly serves as an amusement to longtime best friends Lisa (Cherami Leigh) and Lorenzo (Bryce Papenbrook), whose support is unquestioned even as Leo aims for the impossible.

Returning from an outing to a nearby lake, the trio discovers that Lisa's family home has mysteriously burst into flames, a tragedy made worse by the landlord's insistence that her father pay off his entire debt or have Lisa agree to a marriage with the landlord's less than desirable son.

Leo ain't gonna' be having that.

Determined to come up with a viable solution to raise the money that Lisa needs, Leo, who bears an uncanny resemblance of Hiccup from the How to Train Your Dragon films, heads off to the nearest big city, Florence, along with a collection of his paintings and Lorenzo and Lisa in an effort to either sell the paintings or to obtain work from one of the local masters. While in Florence, they stumble sell the paintings or to obtain work from one of the local masters. While in Florence, they stumble upon a mysterious storyteller who speaks a tale of a hidden treasure that has a one-of-a-kind treasure map that he's willing to part with...could this solve all their problems? Joined in their quest by a fearless little orphan girl, Agnes (Faith Graham), and a self-educated Polish boy named Niccolo (Landen Beattie), they all set out on their adventure where they realize, as is always true in these types of tales, that they are not alone and their quest to discover the treasure won't be easy.

Swirling with excitement amplified by Marco Fedalto's soaring, vibrant original score, Leo Da Vinci is a fun, energetic and kid-friendly endeavor that features beautiful animation and a story that is familiar yet weirdly wonderful in a special kind of way. If you're expecting a historically accurate accounting of a certain Da Vinci, you'd do best to lower your expectations quite a bit. I wouldn't expect much in the way of historical accuracy involving a certain Mona Lisa either, though if we're being fully honest most of us wouldn't know Mona Lisa's historical accuracy if it bit us on the nose.

Ultimately, Leo Da Vinci is a family adventure film that celebrates the ingenuity and loyalty and infinite adventurousness of children and the importance of friendship and teamwork. We wait, but perhaps secretly already know the answer, to find out if Leo's inventiveness, Lorenzo's loyalty and Niccolò and Agnes' clever input will be sufficient to solve the puzzle and determine if the treasure exists and if they will be able to evade the pirates, save Lisa's father, and defeat a team of dastardly pirates determined to claim the treasure for themselves.

Leo Da Vinci: Mission Mona Lisa is a rare and treasured glimpse inside the world of indie animation and, especially for U.S. moviegoers, a wonderful look inside the world of foreign animation with its unique visuals and linguistics. While it may not be the best animated feature you see in 2019, if it arrives in a theater near you it's definitely worth a trip to your local theater to check it out.

Vocal work is strong across the board, neither as wildly inventive as some contemporary cinema nor as dry and functional as can be found in so many of today's Hollywood releases. For more information on the film, visit its official U.S. website linked to in the credits.

Leo Da Vinci: Mission Mona Lisa

Italy 2018

produced by Francesco Manfio (executive), Piotr Dziubak (executive) for Gruppo Aicuni directed by Sergio Manfio written by Sergio Manfio, Francesco Manfio, with the collaboration of Davide Stefanato, Anna Manfio, character design and animation supervision by Anna Stinfale, music by Marco Fedalto review by Mike Haberfelner animation

Young Leonardo Da Vinci is a gifted inventor with ambitions to become a painter as well - but all he really worries about is how to confess his undying love to neighbour girl Lisa (who unsurprisingly is also the model for his Mona Lisa). And then her father's mill burns to the ground, and the landlord demands Lisa's hand in marriage for his son as settlement should her dad be unable to pay his debt. Fortunately, Leo has just learned about a pirate treasure not far off the coast that had so far been deemed unretrievable, but fortunately Leonardo has just developed a diving suit that could make recovery a distinct possibility. So he, Lisa, and two street urchins go to the island nearest where the treasure's supposed to be ... and find a sunken pirate ship but no treasure. But for Lisa's sake, Leonardo won't give up the search and soon finds clues to where the treasure actually is located. There's just one problem: Just around the corner and out of our heroes' sight, a pirate ship is anchored, and the pirate watch Leonardo's every step, being very well aware what he's up to and convinced he will succeed - to then relieve him of the treasure ...

Now a few things up front, basically Leo Da Vinci: Mission Mona Lisa is a computer animated kiddie feature, and on a technical level, it's not on par with the exploits of Pixar, nor is it as spirited narratively as the best films of that studio - and that said, this film on hand has plenty to go for: its designs are simply beautiful, both of its rather authentic looking locations and of Leonardo's steampunky inventions. And while the story might not be super-original its told in a light-footed and fast paced way so to keep the audience entertained throughout. And sure, this film takes many a liberty with the life of one of the greatest inventors of his time, probably all times - but then again this is an animated family feature and not a documentary, made chiefly for entertainment purposes, and in that it succeeds.

Movie Review — "Leo Da Vinci: Mission Mona Lisa" is a cartoon "Creation" about the Great Master's Youth

Posted on July 24, 2019

A movie about the young, curious and already-inventive Leonardo Da Vinci? That's not a bad idea for a work of children's entertainment.

But "Leo Da Vinci: Mission Mona Lisa" is a seriously undemanding if harmless realization of that movie pitch. The Italian production, with dated CGI animation, a voice-actors-only cast, a few limp songs and not much in the line of jokes or clever sight gags, is probably more suitable for small screens. That way the animated details don't matter, and the film's other shortcomings can be ignored as the kids watch in the car, at the laundromat or airport — any place "waiting" is involved.

This Leo (veteran anime voice-actor Johnny Yong Bosch) is a teen tinkerer, barely old

- Movie Review: The answers to a murder mystery lie "Beneath the

This Leo (veteran anime voice-actor Johnny Yong Bosch) is a teen tinkerer, barely old enough to drive. That shouldn't be a problem as, you know, it's the 15th century.

But Leo's always saying, "That's my new invention," and one of them is a combination wind-up roadster, sail-paddle wheel boat and glider he calls "The Barrel." So yes, he drives, recklessly. And those Medieval roads!

His pal Lorenzo (Bryce Papenbrook) is always teasing him about neighbor girl Lisa (Cherami Leigh). She's a long way from "Mona Lisa," but Leo's a sucker for a girl in Renaissance yoga pants.

"You think I like Lisa? We're just friends!"

We're set up for a battle of intellects, because Lisa is "a know-it-all...she always thinks she's right."

But there's no such empowerment in the script. She's just his somewhat appreciative audience for The Barrel, his new diving suit, etc.

When her family's farm burns, Leo resolves to help save Lisa from having to marry a foppish count to cover their debts. He'll seek his fortune in Florence!

Only he falls for the old "shipwreck...treasure map" scam. He and Lisa, a tweenage pickpocket named Agnes (Faith Graham) and tween inventor Niccoló (Landen Beattie) are off to find it.

Lorenzo? He's been kidnapped by pirates, who know a bit about Leo and his inventions. The lead pirate is fond of blue eye makeup. Must be Italian.

There's a goofy rapped narration to a puppet show, pirates chanting in rhyme and a flippant flippant electronic love ballad for Leo to sing through.

"When I am here with you, I am fish inside a creek. And I don't know how to speak. Maybe a mobile phone could help." Or "you are far away, too far to run to you. Maybe a bicycle could help."

Leo was WAY ahead of his time.

There's a little education value here, as a character explains how eclipses happen. Leo takes on the role of myth-buster, briefly, debunking a feared ancient "monster."

Mostly, though, "Mission Mona Lisa" is just a somewhat under-animated (flat, inexpressive faces, blandly animated water and fire, incompetently rendered beards and dolphins) kiddie time-killer with lame "jokes" and limp gags

"So was that fun or was that fun?"

"Listen, in ALL my years of pirating, I never got hit by... (lightning, which then strikes)."

Every promising idea is introduced and forgotten. For instance, Agnes is a street urchin who speaks of herself in the third person, especially when she wants to invite herself along on their adventure.

“Agnes is alone in the world. Agnes just wanted a story she could tell her friends. Agnes never had any friends.”

The “twist” even a ten year-old could see coming.

The cleverest visual touch is a cut-out stick puppet adventure tale rapped out as street entertainment. The “Leonardo” touches are a first crack at the “Mona Lisa” (of teen Lisa) and a pre-adult riff on his Vitruvian Man study.

Does all that add up to a movie? Not for anybody over oh, six.

It’s not awful, and as I said, the conceit is a good building block for a film. Just not this one.

MPAA Rating: unrated, gunplay, a smooch

Cast: The voices of Johnny Yong Bosch, Cherami Leigh, Bryce Papenbrook

Credits: Directed by Sergio Manfio, script by Anna Manfio, Francesco Manfio, Sergio Manfio and Davide Stefanato. An Ammo Animation release.

We have it all for you and you will not want to miss it because it is full of adventure!

We have partnered up with some amazing bloggers to bring you the opportunity to win tickets to see this movie yourself.

About Leo Da Vinci: Mission Mona Lisa

Life is idyllic in the quiet town of Vinci.

The young genius inventor, Leo Da Vinci (voice of Johnny Yong Bosch), is constantly tinkering and testing his inventions while his best friends Lorenzo (voice of Bryce Papenbrook) and Lisa (voice of Cherami Leigh) help -but keep a healthy sense of humor as he shoots for the impossible.

On their return from an outing to a nearby lake, the trio has a shocking surprise: Lisa's family home has mysteriously burst into flames.

To make matters worse, the odious landlord is demanding that her father repay his debts in full or agree to have Lisa marry his despicable son.

Leo has to catch his breath -he can't lose Lisa, especially not like this.

Determined to raise the money Lisa needs, Leo takes his paintings and heads with Lorenzo and Lisa to the nearest big city, Florence, to either sell them or try to get work from a local master.

In the town center, they happen upon a mysterious storyteller who not only tells a tale of hidden treasure but has a one-of-a-kind treasure map that he is willing to sell

Leo da Vinci-Mission Mona Lisa

July 25, 2019 by Vicki — Leave a Comment

We were able to do a sneak preview of the movie, Leo da Vinci-Mission Mona Lisa. This movie will be in theaters August 2nd. Leo Da Vinci, Mission Mona Lisa has been awarded the all ages, Dove Seal of Approval.

This movie is a cute characterization of what Leo da Vinci's life could have been like and how he might have met Mona Lisa. Of course, there has been much speculation of the real part Mona Lisa played in Leonardo Da Vinci's life, so this movie is a cute cartoon that plays upon some ideas of the artists.

This is an Italian based cartoon that was translated into English. The cartoon's mouths usually go along with the words, but a few times there were a few blips. My kids didn't seem to notice. There were a few small songs throughout the movie and great background music. My 9 year old son loved that the movie incorporated many of Leonardo Da Vinci's inventions. However, my 9 year old, who is gifted and really into history, did feel that the inventions weren't an accurate portrayal of what accurately occurred during his lifetime. My nine year old is also a cynic!

Costumes for the cartoons were also not too timely, but cute. I doubt that Mona Lisa would have been wearing pants during the 15th century, nor were the mens' wear timely either. However, I wasn't there and am basing this off of other shows and historical things I have watched.

This movie captivated my children's attention plus made them interested in the inventions of Leonardo Da Vinci. There was humor to keep them captivated and a nice story line that was family friendly.

Leo Da Vinci: Mission Mona Lisa Giveaway- Ends 8-1-19

Welcome to our Leo Da Vinci: Mission Mona Lisa Giveaway!

Imagine a young Leonardo da Vinci hanging out with a young Mona Lisa, and you've got the basis for this new movie opening in limited US theaters on August 2nd. Receiving the all ages approval by The Dove Foundation, this movie is sure to appeal to families with kids. Fun and Giveaway time? You bet! We have it all for you and you will not want to miss it because it is full of adventure! We have partnered up with some amazing bloggers to bring you the opportunity to win tickets to see this movie yourself.

While the movie is a fictional story-telling, it depicts some historical concepts and ideas associated with the real Leonard da Vinci. My kids loved this movie, and felt it was on par with a lot of the big box movies that have been released in recent years. While the movie is independent, it is not low budget, and you can catch hints of inspiration from other animated movies. The only negative comment they had was that they didn't like the theme song played with the closing credits. My son especially felt that this was a good movie. that he thinks his friends would like to

Life is idyllic in the quiet town of Vinci. The young genius inventor, Leo Da Vinci (voice of Johnny Yong Bosch), is constantly tinkering and testing his inventions while his best friends Lorenzo (voice of Bryce Papenbrook) and Lisa (voice of Cherami Leigh) help -but keep a healthy sense of humor as he shoots for the impossible. On their return from an outing to a nearby lake, the trio has a shocking surprise: Lisa's family home has mysteriously burst into flames and to make matters worse, the odious landlord is demanding that her father repay his debts in full –or agree to have Lisa marry his despicable son. Leo has to catch his breath -he can't lose Lisa, especially not like this. Determined to raise the money Lisa needs, Leo takes his paintings and heads with Lorenzo and Lisa to the nearest big city, Florence, to either sell them or try to get work from a local master. In the town center, they happen upon a mysterious storyteller who not only tells a tale of hidden treasure but has a one-of-a-kind treasure map that he is willing to sell. Could this be the solution to Lisa's troubles? Soon our young heroes realize that they are not the only ones on this quest -a group of sinister pirates follows their every move with the intent of stealing the treasure for themselves.

Leo's ingenious inventions, Lisa's brilliant ideas, Lorenzo's loyalty and Niccolò and Agnes' clever input swirl into an exciting crescendo! Does the treasure exist? Will they be able to evade the pirates?

Giveaway!

Imagine a young Leonardo da Vinci hanging out with a young Mona Lisa, and you've got the basis for this new movie opening in limited US theaters on August 2nd. Receiving the all ages approval by The Dove Foundation, this movie is sure to appeal to families with kids. Fun and Giveaway time? You bet! We have it all for you and you will not want to miss it because it is full of adventure! We have partnered up with some amazing bloggers to bring you the opportunity to win tickets to see this movie yourself.

I just LOVE educational moments that are wrapped in fun shapes and this movie is one of those opportunities. This movie can open the doors for you to delve deeper into the history of this amazing artist with your kiddos! Even Miss Sarah gave it 2 thumbs up!

About Leo Da Vinci: Mission Mona Lisa

Life is idyllic in the quiet town of Vinci. The young genius inventor, Leo Da Vinci (voice of Johnny Yong Bosch), is constantly tinkering and testing his inventions while his best friends Lorenzo (voice of Bryce Papenbrook) and Lisa (voice of Cherami Leigh) help -but keep a healthy sense of humor as he shoots for the impossible. On their return from an outing to a nearby lake, the trio has a shocking surprise: Lisa's family home has mysteriously burst into flames and to make matters worse, the odious landlord is demanding that her father repay his debts in full—or agree to have Lisa marry his despicable son. Leo has to catch his breath -he can't lose Lisa, especially not like this. Determined to raise the money Lisa needs, Leo takes his paintings and heads with Lorenzo and Lisa to the nearest big city, Florence, to either sell them or try to get work from a local master. In the town center, they happen upon a mysterious storyteller who not only tells a tale of hidden treasure but has a one-of-a-kind treasure map that he is willing to sell. Could this be the solution to Lisa's troubles? Soon our young heroes realize that they are not the only ones on this quest -a group of sinister pirates follows their every move with the intent of stealing the treasure for themselves.

Life is idyllic in the quiet town of Vinci. The young genius inventor, Leo Da Vinci (voice of Johnny Yong Bosch), is constantly tinkering and testing his inventions while his best friends Lorenzo (voice of Bryce Papenbrook) and Lisa (voice of Cherami Leigh) help -but keep a healthy sense of humor as he shoots for the impossible. On their return from an outing to a nearby lake, the trio has a shocking surprise: Lisa's family home has mysteriously burst into flames and to make matters worse, the odious landlord is demanding that her father repay his debts in full—or agree to have Lisa marry his despicable son. Leo has to catch his breath -he can't lose Lisa, especially not like this. Determined to raise the money Lisa needs, Leo takes his paintings and heads with Lorenzo and Lisa to the nearest big city, Florence, to either sell them or try to get work from a local master. In the town center, they happen upon a mysterious storyteller who not only tells a tale of hidden treasure but has a one-of-a-kind treasure map that he is willing to sell. Could this be the solution to Lisa's troubles? Soon our young heroes realize that they are not the only ones on this quest -a group of sinister pirates follows their every move with the intent of stealing the treasure for themselves.

This movie looks adorable and I can't wait to see it for myself. I have always loved the story of Da Vinci and I think its cool how many different movies that I like have mentioned him or had a cameo character depicting him. I like that this is cute and it will teach kids at the same time.

About Leo Da Vinci: Mission Mona Lisa

Life is idyllic in the quiet town of Vinci. The young genius inventor, Leo Da Vinci (voice of Johnny Yong Bosch), is constantly tinkering and testing his inventions while his best friends Lorenzo (voice of Bryce Papenbrook) and Lisa (voice of Cherami Leigh) help -but keep a healthy sense of humor as he shoots for the impossible. On their return from an outing to a nearby lake, the trio has a shocking surprise: Lisa's family home has mysteriously burst into flames and to make matters worse, the odious landlord is demanding that her father repay his debts in full —or agree to have Lisa marry his despicable son. Leo has to catch his breath -he can't lose Lisa, especially not like this. Determined to raise the money Lisa needs, Leo takes his paintings and heads with Lorenzo and Lisa to the nearest big city, Florence, to either sell them or try to get work from a local master. In the town center, they happen upon a mysterious storyteller who not only tells a tale of hidden treasure but has a one-of-a-kind treasure map that he is willing to sell. Could this be the solution to Lisa's troubles? Soon our young heroes realize that they are not the only ones on this quest -a group of sinister pirates follows their every move with the intent of stealing the treasure for themselves.

Leo's ingenious inventions, Lisa's brilliant ideas, Lorenzo's loyalty and Niccolò and Agnes' clever input swirl into an exciting crescendo! Does the treasure exist? Will they be able to evade the pirates?

dir Mark Blane, Ben Mankoff
scr Mark Blane
prd Carolina Gimenez, Mark Blane with Mark Blane, Joseph Seuffert, Christian Patrick, Patricia Richardson, Jeanine Serralles, Peter Y Kim, Rodney Richardson, Naian Gonzalez Norvind, Matthew Shear, Lucy DeVito, John Duff, Zachary Booth release US Jun.19 fff
19/US 1h23

"Based on a lie", this black comedy recounts the offbeat adventures of filmmaker Mark Blane when he moved to New York. It's a quirky, personal little film that unfolds with its own rhythms and themes. This makes it tricky to identify with, even if the characters remain engaging and intriguing. The way things develop may be stylised and often downright askew, but it's underscored with a sense of honesty.

After his mother (Richardson) helps him move from Indiana to Manhattan, oddball 26-year-old Mark (Blane) hides the fact that he has no plans. He finds a room to rent and gets a job babysitting 6-year-old Milo (Seuffert). Struggling to fit in, he reverts to childhood fantasies of Leather-Man (Patrick), his personal gay superhero. He befriends Russell (Rodney Richardson), who invites him to a book club. And his roommate Briahna (Norvind) keeps him supplied with mind-altering "medication". But Mark doesn't know how relationships are meant to work. And managing his life doesn't come naturally.

Mark's interior life is visible through clever animation and depictions of his daydreams. What this reveals is a childish young man with a vivid imagination, so it's hardly surprising that his best friend is 6 years old. But he's not as dopey as he acts, acutely aware of other people even as he's lead into a variety of problems. His concept of sexuality comes from a gay magazine he looked at as a boy, so his drawings are pornographic, even though he's essentially sexless.

In the role, Blane remains likeable even as Mark orchestrates most of his own problems. He may be a dork, but his pure intentions make even his most transgressive behaviour seem innocent. Other characters don't see him this clearly, so are often horrified. The actors play them with earthy realism that's a sharp contrast to Blane's cluelessness. Standouts include Serralles and Kim as Milo's distinctly different parents, and Shear, DeVito and Duff as Mark's eclectic flatmates.

Astonishingly, the film never laughs at Mark, refusing to poke fun at either his naivete, or the more shocking things he does without realising the impact of his actions. Blane has created Mark as a kind of alter-ego, and by allowing the writing and direction to remain sympathetic to Mark, the film actually finds some important things to say about protective childhoods and the way we choose to treat people who are different from ourselves. It's also disarmingly entertaining to follow Mark on this odyssey.

Shadows on the Wall | Arthouse Films

dir-scr Doug Spearman
 prd Thomas Martin, Ren Heeralal, Steven Wallace, Meade Thayer with Scott Bailey, Darryl Stephens, Kelli Lefkovitz, Adam Klesh, Jay Huguley, Stephen Bowman, Richard Lawson, Leslie Zemeckis, Matt Cipro, Jimmy Shaw, Jai Rodriguez, Gregory Zarian release UK Mar.19 flare, US Jul.19 off
 19/US 1h46

An ambitious romantic comedy with hints of deeper themes, this bright and watchable movie is loaded with good-looking people who remain likeable even when they do something stupid. Writer-director Doug Spearman orchestrates the twisty plot with some flair, although the film can't help but feel somewhat simplistic and predictable, especially with an uneven collection of side performances. But even if the story is somewhat arch, it's easy to identify with the central characters.

In Philadelphia, Jack (Bailey) is married to Karla (Lefkovitz), with whom he has two lively daughters. But he's finding it increasingly difficult to suppress his desire for men. In a bar he meets Pete (Stephens), a charming guy with a penchant for married men. His dad (Lawson), who's about to marry his girlfriend (Zemeckis), calls him on his commitment issues. But as Jack and Pete fall in love, it's Jack who will need to take action. And circumstances keep making this more difficult for him. Then Pete meets someone else (Klesh).

The path to romance in this film, as the title suggests, is rather sudden. Jack and Pete have such a cute meeting and courtship, and such intense love for each other, that it feels like something only a screenwriter would come up with. Then their various peccadilloes emerge, adding a loud clank of the rom-com plot machinery. Clearly the important thing is that the audience falls for these people, and at least Spearman makes sure that happens.

Stephens deploys his understated on-screen magnetism, effortlessly generating steam in each scene. His connections with everyone feel earthy and honest. Bailey has a scruffier likeability, but works nicely opposite his costars, including scene-stealing bit players. The supporting cast members bring plenty of spark to their roles, helping create a wide, lively community for Pete and Jack to live within. Although some of them badly overplay their roles.

This is the kind of movie that never feels terribly realistic, even though there are elements in the people and situations that resonate. It's certainly an easy film to enjoy, since its heart is in the right place, trying to explore the idea that love comes along when we least expect it, and that following our heart is the only way to move forward successfully. There's not much more to it than that, and if we engage our brains it all falls apart. But it's rather satisfying as a bit of warm, witty escapism.

Recasting Leonardo Da Vinci as a teen action hero is more than a little contrived, but filmmakers on this Italian-Polish production have some fun with the idea, crafting an adventure that looks and feels like a low-budget variation on How to Train Your Dragon. Children won't mind the cheap-looking animation or the cheesy story. But some imagery is beautifully designed and the characters are sparky enough to be entertaining.

Teen inventor Leo (Bosch) has all kinds of projects in the works, while his chucklehead pal Lorenzo (Papenbrook) teases him that he likes their friend Lisa (Leigh) more than he admits. But Lisa worries that Leo's absurd inventions won't help with real-world problems, like the crop her father (Sorich) just lost. So Leo sets out to help her, seeking a mythical lost treasure that he thinks he can find using his inventions, teaming up with street urchins Agnes and Niccolo (Graham and Beattie). But there are mysterious figures lurking everywhere, including evil pirates.

Leo's inventions include cars, gliders, ink-filled pens and a diving suit that, along with the modern-day dialog, eliminate any real sense of the 15th century. The script is very simplistic, aimed at young children with its corny jokes, silly slapstick and cackling villains. There's no nuance in the characters or storyline, so it's about as involving as a Saturday morning cartoon. But it's fast-paced, brightly energetic and nutty enough to just about hold the attention of even a cynical film critic.

The voice cast is solid, offering enjoyably edges along the way. So even though everybody is somewhat bland, there are quirks that add a bit of interest. Without the rendering power of the big studios, the animation looks plasticky, with characters who aren't particularly original-looking. But the settings are often strikingly visual in wide shots, with some strong colours and textures in the backgrounds. Set pieces are staged with mildly suspenseful elements, but it's more comical than scary.

There are also some half-hearted attempts at drama, romance and even musical numbers. Although the generally goofy tone keeps the film from ever grabbing hold, it's diverting enough while it lasts, as the intrepid Leo and Lisa take on the greedy pirate captain (Price) and his bumbling goons, plus a shadowy bad guy who has his own secret mission. There are a few big wrinkles in the story that further complicate things, while adding nothing particularly meaningful. But it'll keep kids quiet for 85 minutes.

Review: A horrendous trailer design for a film that shouldn't be released to theaters and barely merits release on home video. It's a garish, poorly design animated adventure that rewrites history in cheap and uninspiring ways.

FILM REVIEW: LEO DA VINCI: MISSION MONA LISA

July 25, 2019 / Dave Taylor / Dad at the Movies / No Comments

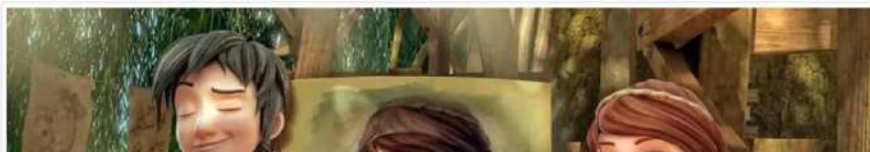

We all know Leonardo da Vinci as one of the great inventors of the Renaissance, a creative genius who was probably one of the smartest individuals to ever grace our planet. But what about when he was just a kid? Was he a fun-loving adventurer constantly fiddling with new ideas as he explored the hills of Vinci, his beloved Italian hometown?

The family film Leo Da Vinci: Mission Mona Lisa offers a vision of how Leo's childhood might have been spent, in bright, vivid 3D computer animation. Leo (voice of Johnny Yong Bosch) and his pal Lorenzo (voice of Bryce Papenbrook) roam the Vinci countryside, testing out Leo's latest inventions and looking for adventure. When they visit Leo's crush Lisa (voice of Cherami Leigh), the results are as cute as they are predictable: Leonardo stutters and blushes? You bet he does!

But when Lisa's family estate burns down, it's up to the three pals to figure out how to quickly raise some money to pay off their rent to the unforgiving landlord. Leo and Lorenzo want to help, so the three head to Florence to try and sell some of Leo's paintings, notably a painting that sure as heck looks like the Mona Lisa in sketch form.

It's treasure that catches their imagination, however, when a sly gypsy spins an incredible tale of riches identified through a map that he's selling at the bargain price of one florin! What kid doesn't love a quest for treasure, and the fact that it offers a chance for Leo to try out some of his inventions is just an added bonus. It's not long before cute orphan girl Agnes (voice of Faith Graham) and young astronomer Niccolò (voice of Landen Beattie) join their quest, and they add a lot of additional fun (and a point of connection for younger viewers too).

Dave Taylor writes about his experiences as a single dad with three great kids and his occasionally tenuous grip on sanity. He's pretty sure they're related.

Leo shows Lisa his drawing, from "Leo Da Vinci: Mission Mona Lisa"

Behind the scenes there are pirates afoot too, however, because treasures and oceans always involve pirates! They are definitely in the Disney vein of incompetent twits more than anything truly threatening so there's real no peril or tension, even when Leo and gang are captured by the pirates who want to acquire the treasure.

There are innumerable storyline hiccups and illogical sequences, inventions that wouldn't actually work and even a confusing title: There's not much in the film about the Mona Lisa painting. But that doesn't deter from the enjoyment of this simple, straightforward and innocent animated film. There's no adult subtext like modern Pixar and Disney films either, it's really aimed directly at children.

And it's children that are going to enjoy this. My youngest is 15 and she's definitely too old for Leo Da Vinci: Mission Mona Lisa. I imagine children up to, and possibly into their tweens are the perfect target for this film, however, and recommend it as good, wholesome and entertaining family fare.

Leo Da Vinci: Mission Mona Lisa releases in theaters on August 2

Hitting our screens across the US on August 2, Leo Da Vinci: Mission Mona Lisa is the family fun film we've all been waiting for. Everyone remembers those trips to the movies with the whole family: the popcorn, the buckets of soda, the snacks. Little eyes look up in awe at the thrills and spills of their pint-sized heroes on the big screen, and when their older those eyes never forget the memories of great times with all the family. Even better, Leo Da Vinci: Mission Mona Lisa adds a touch of history by bringing this innovative genius to life - in child-style...Read more

"Leo Da Vinci: Mission Mona Lisa" is fun for the whole family.

BY DOUGLAS DAVIDSON ON JULY 30, 2019 · (0)

With the LEGO films, a Secret Life sequel, an upcoming Playmobil film — not a joke — and all the other big studio animated films, it's easy to miss out on the smaller films from less well-known studios. One such film is the upcoming release of director Sergio Manfroi's Leo Da Vinci: Mission Mona Lisa, a charming Italian film which spent all of 2019 releasing in various overseas countries before landing in the States. Does it have the biggest names in Hollywood? No. Does it feature a well-rounded cast of characters? Not exactly. But will it entertain your littlest of kids for a while? Absolutely.

Lisa excited about her painting with Leo in LEO DA VINCI: MISSION MONA LISA.

The young inventor Leo Da Vinci (voiced by Johnny Bosch) live in a small town in Italy where he toils away the time devising new and amazing creations. When not devising a new method of motorized transport he calls the Barrel or a suit capable of helping the wearer walk underwater safely, he's spending time with friends Lorenzo (voiced by Bryce Papenbrook) and Lisa (voiced by Cherami Leigh), the latter for whom he harbors a secret crush. Returning home after testing out new equipment, the trio discover that the crops on Lisa's family farm all burned down. Without the harvest from the fields, Lisa's father won't be able to pay the rent on the land and Lisa may have to marry the landowner's son as payment. Convinced he can find a solution to save his friend, Leo heads to Florence where he learns of a buried treasure that may be the key to saving Lisa's land and freedom. What Leo doesn't realize is that a band of pirates has an eye on the treasure as well and will stop at nothing to get it.

Pirate Captain and Pirates Negotiate in LEO DA VINCI: MISSION MONA LISA.

Leo Da Vinci has more in common with Disney's Goldie & Bear, a series which takes the fables of our youth and lets them play in a giant sandbox, than say Disney's Mulan, which borrows from a historical figure, Hua Mulan, to create its story. This shouldn't suggest that there's nothing of value in the tale, but it's important to set expectations. As far as history is concerned, no one really knows who the real Mona Lisa was or what her relationship with the artist and inventor was, but that didn't stop Manfio and co-writer Francesco Manfio from embellishing one of their own. This allows them to craft an action-adventure story with a hint of romanticism for the era in human history. The Renaissance was a period of inspiration and invention as the concepts and creations from the Middle Age gave way to the notions which serve as the foundation for modern thought and innovation. That's an exciting time to use as their jumping off point and the story takes full advantage of that, even using knock-off concepts of Leo's work as props for jokes. Keep in mind, however, that the time period only serves as an entry point to Leo as a character and not as the real deal. Leo Da Vinci is as much an inspired by true events film as National Treasure, but that doesn't stop it from being entertaining. That said, Leo is decidedly for a younger audience that Treasure is.

Lorenzo Leo in LEO DA VINCI: MISSION MONA LISA.

If you've ever seen Netflix's Beat Bugs or Disney's Goldie & Bear, then the animation style within Leo Da Vinci will not only look familiar, but communicate the exact kind of adventure audiences are in for. It's not low-grade by any stretch, it's just that the other aforementioned programs aren't as interested in mind-blowing animation (see Spider-Man: Into the Spider-Verse) as they are in telling a wholesome story that will entertain their audience. That means slightly exaggerated features, characters who are more tropes than individuals, animals who can balloon out past reason, and violence that's more implied than explicit. Considering that the film is clearly aiming for family-friendly entertainment, the kind you can plop your child in front of for over an hour and not worry about what they might see or experience, it hits all the target areas: Silly jokes, sly references to Da Vinci's famous works, and a love story which is sweet, even if a touch problematic.

Leo and the shark in LEO DA VINCI: MISSION MONA LISA.

We're now in an era of too much content. Digital platforms are multiplying, content is increasing, and all of it is becoming harder to navigate. This is especially problematic for families who just want to put something on without worrying about language, violence, or, really, any kind of content that might influence or negatively impact their kids. Granted Leo Da Vinci: Mission Mona Lisa is a theatrical release, not something that can be enjoyed at home, but there's still an opportunity here to beat the heat and enjoy a worry-free cinematic experience. No world-ending threats, no beings of superhuman power, no violent exploits, no real danger of any kind. Just some wholesome fun. When you're looking for family entertainment, what more do you really need?

WHAT PARENTS NEED TO KNOW

Parents need to know that Leo Da Vinci: Mission Mona Lisa is an animated adventure that portrays the famous painter/inventor as a young adult. Da Vinci (voiced by Johnny Yong Bosch) uses his genius to help his crush get money after her family's farm is destroyed (their romance, including a kiss, is part of the story). Since this is a historical piece, young children may not understand that contraptions like a cart that moves itself, a primitive plane, a parachute, and an underwater breathing apparatus

WHAT'S THE STORY?

In LEO DA VINCI: MISSION MONA LISA, when his friend Lisa's farm is destroyed in a fire, a young Leonardo Da Vinci (voiced by Johnny Yong Bosch) puts his inventions to use to find a lost, underwater treasure to help her family. When he discovers pirates are after the same treasure -- and after him to secure it -- Leo must use his ingenuity to save himself and his friends.

IS IT ANY GOOD?

Making the original Renaissance man into a STEM-oriented action hero is a great idea, but this film's amateurish computer graphics defeat the purpose of celebrating one of history's greatest artists. Leonardo Da Vinci's right brain worked as hard as his left, but Leo Da Vinci: Mission Mona Lisa doesn't come close to giving kids a real appreciation for how sharp he really was. Still, it serves as an introduction to him, his ideas, and his works. When the pirates realize that young Da Vinci's underwater

Leo Da Vinci: Mission Mona Lisa

2019-07-31 08:53 Shenzhen Daily

Elements of the real-life Leonardo Da Vinci are woven into a fantasy* tale about a chase after buried treasures in this animation film.

This Da Vinci (veteran anime voice-actor Johnny Yong Bosch) is a teen tinkerer*, barely old enough to drive. That shouldn't be a problem as it's the 15th century.

He's always saying, "That's my new invention," and one of them is a combination wind-up roadster, sail-paddle wheel boat and glider he calls "The Barrel."

His pal Lorenzo (Bryce Papenbrook) is always teasing* him about neighbor girl Lisa (Cherami Leigh). Da Vinci has a secret crush on her.

We're set up for a battle of intellects, because Lisa is "a know-it-all — she always thinks she's right." But the film doesn't elaborate on that. Instead, Lisa is just his admiring audience for The Barrel, his new diving suit and other gadgets. While he's trying to impress her with a new invention, a fire levels her family's farm. She blames him for her absence and never wants to see him again.

Trying to win back her friendship, Da Vinci resolves to help save Lisa from having to marry a foppish* count to cover their debts. He'll seek his fortune in Florence, together with his friend Lorenzo.

Unable to keep the secret, Lorenzo reveals to Lisa the plans, and Lisa joins the trip to the big city, where they meet a storyteller that explains in a plaza the story of a pirate ship sunken with a great treasure inside it. Believing it as a true event, Da Vinci buys the treasure map and starts the treasure hunt.

He and Lisa, a pickpocket named Agnes (Faith Graham) and another inventor Niccolo (Landen Beattie) are off to find the treasures.

The pirates, who know a bit about Da Vinci and his inventions, kidnap Lorenzo to force the young inventor to bring them the treasure. Now he has to save his friends, save Lisa's family's farm and find a way to a happy ending.

There's a goofy rapped narration to a puppet show, pirates chanting in rhyme and a flippant* electronic love ballad for Da Vinci to sing through.

"When I am here with you, I am a fish inside a creek. And I don't know how to speak. Maybe a mobile phone could help." The kid is way ahead of his time.

When a character explains how eclipses happen, Da Vinci takes on the role of myth-buster, debunking* a feared ancient monster.

There is not much surprise throughout the film, as a 10-year-old could see the "twist" coming. (SD-Agencies)

This Film's Homemade Movie Snacks:

With every film, we must have snacks! After all, one can't watch a fantastic movie without needing something to snack on, so before we began, we chose some sweet and salty deliciousness to enjoy! We decided to have Pizza Rolls, popcorn and shakes made with our amazing homemade chocolate syrup!

Once we had our yummy movie food, we could begin the Mission!

Leo Da Vinci: Mission Mona Lisa Review

From the very beginning of this movie I was smiling. It's cute and has silly yet funny humor. Definitely some qualities I truly appreciate!

The film includes music that will keep everyone drawn in and, at times, even make you smile or laugh. The concept of Leonardo da Vinci being young and seeing all of what he might have been like or had invented was really entertaining.

Without adding any spoilers, I will say I love the little touches they add throughout the story. The things one would never imagine in a story about Leo Da Vinci and the movies particular style of nuanced humor.

My total adult confession: Mona Lisa is far more pretty in this rendition. Of course, at the time, she was probably considered far more pretty than we consider her today... Anyway...

The story is quite enjoyable and the animation is done very well. It's certainly a film for the whole family. Everyone will find something to smile while watching this one!

My only spoiler:

The scared fish. Oh. My. Gosh. that made me laugh. Really laugh and I'm going to be remember that for a while!

About Leo Da Vinci: Mission Mona Lisa

Life is idyllic in the quiet town of Vinci. The young genius inventor, Leo Da Vinci (voice of Johnny Yong Bosch), is constantly tinkering and testing his inventions while his best friends Lorenzo (voice of Bryce Papenbrook) and Lisa (voice of Cherami Leigh) help -but keep a healthy sense of humor as he shoots for the impossible.

On their return from an outing to a nearby lake, the trio has a shocking surprise: Lisa's family home has mysteriously burst into flames and to make matters worse, the odious landlord is demanding that her father repay his debts in full —or agree to have Lisa marry his despicable son.

Leo has to catch his breath -he can't lose Lisa, especially not like this. Determined to raise the money Lisa needs, Leo takes his paintings and heads with Lorenzo and Lisa to the nearest big city, Florence, to either sell them or try to get work from a local master. In the town center, they happen upon a mysterious storyteller who not only tells a tale of hidden treasure but has a one-of-a-kind treasure map that he is willing to sell.

Could this be the solution to Lisa's troubles? Soon our young heroes realize that they are not the only ones on this quest -a group of sinister pirates follows their every move with the intent of stealing the treasure for themselves.

Leo Da Vinci: Mission Mona Lisa

Even a cup of ill-timed afternoon coffee was barely enough to keep me from nodding off during director Sergio Manifo's animated adventure. The premise was interesting, centered around a teenage Leonardo Da Vinci who brings mechanical contraptions into being in 15th century Italy. But as we passed the 10 minute mark with no inciting incident, I realized we were in trouble.

Eventually we get it. Leo's friend Lisa's farm has been vandalized. The crops are destroyed. And without them, Lisa's dad can't pay the mortgage and she'll have to be married off to the anemic son of their nobleman landlord.

The film has a little bit of everything: jokes that don't land, phoned-in voice acting, questionable gender stereotypes (girls are described as "moody" and cry to get their way), characters who lack development, painful musical numbers that appear out of nowhere, exposition dumps delivered through dialogue, and a romance that makes Anakin and Padme's in Attack of the Clones look nuanced.

But my favorite thing by far is the closing song. I'll leave you with some of the lyrics:

When I am here with you

I'm a fish inside a creek

And I don't know how to speak

Maybe a mobile phone would help

Kid says...

I enjoyed it more than the Little Mermaid, but less than Frozen. Leo was my favorite character. He did the fun stuff. Lisa, the girl, was ok. I'd watch it again. It was kind of scary in parts. Why does everything end up a skeleton in this movie?

Mom's Verdict:

VERDICT: ★★☆☆☆

Emmy's Verdict:

Movie Minute: Leo Da Vinci - Mission Mona Lisa

Meet the young, genius inventor Leonardo Da Vinci and his best friends Lorenzo and Lisa as they embark on a wild and exciting adventure. From flying cars, treasure maps, pirates and sailing ships, it's a family adventure everyone will love! In theaters August 2nd, 2019.

I had a chance to see a screener for this film, and it's cute. It takes an imaginative look at what a child Leonardo Da Vinci may have been like (clever, artistic, somewhat absent-minded) and then throws in a fantastical adventure involving pirates, treasure, and even rap and an allusion to evil villains from classic cartoons. My kids enjoyed it, and it made a good family movie for us all to enjoy.

ABOUT THE FILM:

Life is idyllic in the quiet town of Vinci. The young genius inventor, Leo da Vinci (voice of Power Ranger Johnny Yong Bosch), is continuously tinkering and testing his inventions while his best friends, Lorenzo (voice of Bryce Papenbrook) and Lisa (voice of Cherami Leigh), help but keep a healthy sense of humor as he shoots for the impossible.

On their return from an outing to a nearby lake, the trio has a shocking surprise: Lisa's family home has mysteriously burst into flames and, to make matters worse, the odious landlord is demanding that her father repay his debts in full — or agree to have Lisa marry his despicable son.

Leo has to catch his breath — he can't lose Lisa, especially not like this.

Determined to raise the money Lisa needs, Leo takes his paintings and heads with Lorenzo and Lisa to the nearest big city, Florence, to either sell them or try to get work from a local master. In the town center, they happen upon a mysterious storyteller who not only tells a tale of hidden treasure but has a one-of-a-kind treasure map that he is willing to sell. Could this be the solution to Lisa's troubles?

During their quest for the treasure, Lisa, Lorenzo and Leo are helped by a little girl, Agnes (voice of Faith Graham), a fearless and resourceful street orphan, and Niccolò (voice of Landen Beattie), a little Polish boy who has taught himself all there is to know about the stars and constellations.

Soon, our young heroes realize that they are not the only ones on this quest — a group of sinister pirates follows their every move with the intent of stealing the treasure for themselves.

Leo's ingenious inventions, Lisa's brilliant ideas, Lorenzo's loyalty and Niccolò and Agnes' clever input swirl into an exciting crescendo. Does the treasure exist? Will they be able to evade the pirates? Will Lisa's father be saved? It's a race to the finish, in this story of courage, bravery, and friendship: LEO DA VINCI: MISSION MONA LISA.

One of the more well-known releases this weekend is the most recent film in the Fast & the Furious franchise - Fast & Furious Presents: Hobbs & Shaw. Instead of the usual cast of characters we're used to from this film series, this time it spins off and forces two characters from the series that are complete opposites - Dwayne Johnson's lawman Hobbs and Jason Statham's lawless Shaw - to work together and take on Idris Elba's villainous Brixton.

Also on offer this weekend is an animated adventure about a young Leonardo Da Vinci, a documentary about an eccentric photographer, a thriller set deep in the Appalachian Mountains and much more!

Leo da Vinci, el filme de animación italiano, desembarca en EEUU (foto: ANSA)

19:46, 28 JUL • ROMA • REDACCIÓN ANSA

(ANSA) - ROMA, 28 JUL - Un film de animación italiano, "Leo Da Vinci-Misión Mona Lisa", que evoca la adolescencia del genio del Renacimiento, llegará a varias salas de Estados Unidos y también será distribuido en DVD.

La película fue producida por Gruppo Alconi, dirigida por Sergio Manfio, también coautor del guión junto a su hermano Francesco, con la colaboración de Anna Manfio y Davide Stefanato. La historia gira en torno del extraordinario científico toscano antes de que el mundo supiera de su gran ingenio y desde el 2 de agosto se exhibirá en 18 ciudades estadounidenses.

El Leo imaginado por Manfio es un adolescente con ideas ingeniosas

El Leo imaginado por Manfio es un adolescente con ideas ingeniosas aunque extrañas, quien cuenta con la ayuda de su amigo Lorenzo y de Lisa (la joven Mona Lisa), que lo observan sin mucha convicción.

De regreso a un paseo al lago, donde Leo ha probado otra de sus invenciones, los tres jóvenes descubren que la casa de Lisa y los campos lindantes están en llamas. Para ayudar a la chica y a su padre, quienes han perdido todo, Leo y Lorenzo van en busca de un tesoro escondido, enfrentando a un grupo de temibles piratas. Entre aventura y comedia, la película de animación está dirigida a la familia. Y tras su estreno comercial, se la verá en televisión, tanto en canales de cable como en "pay TV".

También se comercializará en formato DVD. La distribución en Estados Unidos es solo otro escalón ascendente en el éxito de la obra, por la que ya se firmaron acuerdos en más de 60 países.

"Al crear y producir a Leo da Vinci éramos conscientes de que el genio toscano tenía una gran fama pero no pensábamos que fuese tan vasta en todo el mundo", relató el director en diálogo con la prensa. Agregó que especialmente están "impactados por el éxito del joven Leo, que fue muy apreciado justamente por que no propusimos un pequeño genio sino un joven común, con sus dudas, límites y dificultades".

"Estamos, también, felices por las críticas positivas que recibimos sobre el personaje de Lisa que, si bien se trata de una aventura ambientada en 1466, se reveló como una joven moderna y real", señaló. El éxito obtenido fue un estímulo fundamental para acelerar la producción de la serie televisiva creada por Sergio y Francesco Manfio y coproducida por RAI Ragazzi (la RAI con contenido infantil), Cosmos Animation Singapore y All Rights Entertainment. La serie tendrá 52 episodios de 13 minutos de duración. Los primeros 13 serán emitidos en Italia por Rai Gulp a partir del 10 de septiembre próximo. (ANSA).

It's only fair to share...

Disclosure: This is a sponsored post. I was compensated via gift, cash payment or something of value. I write my honest opinions. I will only recommend if I feel strongly about something and I believe it would be a fit for my readers.

Looking for a new movie to watch with the family? Coming out on August 2nd to select theaters, is Leo Da Vinci: Mission Mona Lisa. This is a great family movie for all to enjoy. If this one is in your area, I would highly recommend going to see it. It's a great adventure movie that's got a lot of imagination. Many laughs to be had with this movie too. I really enjoyed this one myself, and I really loved the overall story. I was really excited to finally see a movie about such a famous artist, Leo Da Vinci.

Hello! I'm Kathy. I'm a full time mother of two daughters. I also have a husband who I've been married to for 10 years. I'm passionate about food, DIY, photography & animals. I enjoy cooking, traveling, taking photos, writing and spending time with my family.

It all begins in dehumanizing but fascinating wide angle shots. Slowly, clip by clip, Singer draws us in closer to the diabolical unfolding in our midst. It's the deconstruction of a possession film, a bare-bones experimental feature that hangs together because of its clever turns, solid performances and Singer's own technical savvy with sound design.

Running about 70 minutes and boasting no more than 6 speaking roles, Luz is surrealism at its most basic, storytelling at its sparest.

Leo Da Vinci: Mission Mona Lisa

by Christie Robb and Emmy Clifton, MaddWolf.com

During the recent heatwave as a bid to keep everyone entertained and out of the sun, I asked my upcoming Kindergartner, Emmy, to help me with my latest movie review.

Mom says...

Even a cup of ill-timed afternoon coffee was barely enough to keep me from nodding off during director Sergio Manifo's animated adventure. The premise was interesting, centered around a teenage Leonardo Da Vinci who brings mechanical contraptions into being in 15th century Italy. But as we passed the 10 minute mark with no inciting incident, I realized we were in trouble.

realized we were in trouble.

Eventually we get it. Leo's friend Lisa's farm has been vandalized. The crops are destroyed. And without them, Lisa's dad can't pay the mortgage and she'll have to be married off to the anemic son of their nobleman landlord.

The film has a little bit of everything: jokes that don't land, phoned-in voice acting, questionable gender stereotypes (girls are described as "moody" and cry to get their way), characters who lack development, painful musical numbers that appear out of nowhere, exposition dumps delivered through dialogue, and a romance that makes Anakin and Padme's in Attack of the Clones look nuanced.

But my favorite thing by far is the closing song. I'll leave you with some of the lyrics:

When I am here with you

I'm a fish inside a creek

And I don't know how to speak

Maybe a mobile phone would help

Kid says...

I enjoyed it more than the Little Mermaid, but less than Frozen. Leo was my favorite character. He did the fun stuff. Lisa, the girl, was ok. I'd watch it again. It was kind of scary in parts. Why does everything end up a skeleton in this movie?

Mom's Verdict:

Emmy's Verdict:

Sword of Trust

by Cat McAlpine, MaddWolf.com

On a hot summer day Cynthia (Jillian Bell) and Mary (Michaela Watkins) walk into an Alabama pawn shop with a sword to sell. Shop owner Mel (Marc Maron) listens in disbelief as the women explain: This isn't just any sword. This Union officer's sword, and its accompanying documents, can prove that the South actually won the Civil War.

Sword of Trust pokes at what and who we believe in, and why. What leads people to believe that the world is actually flat or the deep state is actively erasing battles from history books? How many times can we forgive someone before we simply can't anymore? Filmed on location in Birmingham, the pace of the film matches the speed of summer in the south. No one moves too fast, talks too loud, or quite gets to the point.

Penned by Lynn Shelton (who also directed) and Mike O'Brien, the dialogue is almost too natural, suggesting that most of the script was largely improvised. The frame work is a little choppy, with a focus on Cynthia and Mary at the start that suggests more of an ensemble focus than is delivered.

As the action picks up Cynthia, Mary, Mel, and pawn shop assistant Nathaniel (Jon Bass, loveable) all warily agree to pile into the back of a moving van with an unknown destination.

"This is definitely how people die."

"This is how individual people die. There's four of us."

Then, we're hit with a momentum bait and switch. The longest scene of the film takes place in the back of the van where the characters explain exactly how they came to this point in their lives. This is when realize the real film is about Mel, and his ability to find satisfaction in life despite its disappointments.

As the emotional epicenter, Maron is a marvelous star. Not dissimilar

Fast & Furious Presents: Hobbs & Shaw

by Hope Madden, MaddWolf.com

Somewhere around its 6th installment, the Fast & Furious franchise tweaked its direction, abandoning logic and embracing ludicrous action as it jumped cars from skyscraper to skyscraper and waterskied off the back of launched torpedoes.

But things took off for real around Episode 7 when some mad genius decided to pit mountainous government operative Hobbs (Dwayne Johnson) against Limey nogoodnik Deckard Shaw (Jason Statham), each of them playing a self-lamponing version of themselves. Fun!

Where to go from there? How about we drop that whole car heist and espionage thing, expel Vincent Toretto and gang, bring in Idris Elba and see what happens?

And for the very first time, I was kind of looking forward to a F&F film.

Fast & Furious Presents: Hobbs & Shaw boasts more than ampersands. Internal logic? Cohesive plot? Thoughtful insights on man’s inhumanity to man?

Why, no.

Cheeky fun? Indeed!

Teacher concerns a preppy English teacher (David Dastmalchian) at a posh suburban high school who witnesses a fight break out between two students. The chief aggressor is a jock with a rich dad (Kevin Pollack, in one of his best roles in years) whose prominence in the community makes it difficult for disciplinary action to be carried out. His desire to protect the bullied student extends into vigilante territory, instigating a downward spiral. Adam Dick wrote and directed this slow-burning low budget thriller.

MOVIE PICK: MORE FAST & FURIOUSNESS IN HOBBS & SHAW

NATHANIEL BELL • AUGUST 1, 2019

Fast & Furious Presents: Hobbs & Shaw prolongs Universal's biggest franchise of all time with a spinoff created for Dwayne Johnson and Jason Statham. The former is an American federal agent and the latter is a British criminal; the two team up to defeat an MI6 rogue operative (Idris Elba) turned global terrorist. Former stuntman (and World Stunt Award winner) David Leitch directed this high-octane action yarn that keeps the mayhem PG-13. Opening nationwide.

Leo DaVinci: Mission Mona Lisa Opens August 2

As one of the great geniuses of the Renaissance, Leonardo DaVinci continues to be a subject of fascination, not just for his paintings but for his invention diagrams that were way ahead of their time. DaVinci was undeniably awesome and his impact on pop culture continues to this day. This man had a Ninja Turtle named after him, the LEADER Turtle for crying out loud.

It remains to be seen what kind of honor Leo DaVinci: Mission Mona Lisa will bestow upon this guy. A foreign animated film dubbed into English and released in a little over thirty theaters nationwide, it may not matter if no one sees it anyway. But just so we're clear, it's a film in which the young Leo crushes on Lisa (yes, the "Mona" one), has a flying machine that really works, fights pirates, and has the backup of supporting characters who make poses like this:

At least she's not dabbing.

There is trouble in Italy. Lisa's home has burned down! Having no way of reimbursing the landlord, the man demands Lisa's father marry her off to his awful son instead! Leo has to stop this from happening, and when he stumbles on a treasure map, he may have found a solution. Too bad the aforementioned pirates are also after it. Wackiness ensues, all of it 100% historically accurate.

The only marquee name in the English dub of Leo Da Vinci: Mission Mona Lisa is prolific anime VA Johnny Yong Bosch as the title character (not Lisa), but it also has Cherami Leigh, Bryce Papenbrook, Faith Graham, Landen Beattie, Michael Sorich, Keith Silverstein, Jamieson Price, Darrel Guilbeau and Tom Fahn. It runs 85 minutes and, who knows, could be entertaining enough. Check out the trailer below....

Tips for Tuesday - Movies: Leo Da Vinci: Mission Mona Lisa

We have been given free advance access to Leo Da Vinci: Mission Mona Lisa for review purposes. Any and all opinions expressed here are our own.

Movies: Leo Da Vinci: Mission Mona Lisa

Mom - Today I am recommending Leo Da Vinci: Mission Mona Lisa. This a cute movie about young artist and inventor, Leo Da Vinci. He and his friend, Lisa and two younger children go on a mission to find a lost treasure so Lisa's father can pay off his debt, and she is not forced to marry someone she hates. The story is entertaining although a bit old fashioned in the idea that Lisa has to be rescued from the impending doom that awaits her by a male friend. Although, Lisa does not sit by idly and wait to be rescued she actively participates as well, it is clear that Leo is the one who takes charge in this story. Although the animation may not be state of the art, the characters movements seem quite jerky at times, the film is visually beautiful. The colors are very vibrant, and some shots do seem quite lifelike particularly the nature shots like a beautiful waterfall. All in all, though it is a engaging film that can be enjoyed by the whole family.

FILMS ABOUT WOMEN OPENING

The Nightingale – Written and Directed by Jennifer Kent

"The Nightingale" is Jennifer Kent's follow-up to her 2014 horror hit "The Babadook." It was the only film directed by a woman to screen in Competition at last year's Venice Film Festival – this year there will be two. The film tells the story of a young woman (Aisling Franciosi) who, after serving a prison sentence in what is now known as Tasmania, experiences a horrific tragedy and seeks revenge against the soldiers who have wronged her. She goes about her hunt with the help of an indigenous man (Baykali Ganambarr) whose land is being stolen and desecrated by the colonizers. "The Nightingale" is a story of two unlikely companions. It is a story of – trigger alert – rape and pilfering. It is tough to watch, but important because the violence it depicts is the violence of colonization. White people usurping land just because they can and have guns. People losing everything because their skin is different. It is a story of a difficult past that has extreme relevance today. Kent shows everything and in that display you must not turn away. You must see and you must feel. It is an extremely brave movie. (Melissa Silverstein)

Leo Da Vinci: Mission Mona Lisa

by Christie Robb and Emmy Clifton

During the recent heatwave as a bid to keep everyone entertained and out of the sun, I asked my upcoming Kindergartner, Emmy, to help me with my latest movie review.

Mom says...

Even a cup of ill-timed afternoon coffee was barely enough to keep me from nodding off during director Sergio Manifo's animated adventure. The premise was interesting, centered around a teenage Leonardo Da Vinci who brings mechanical contraptions into being in 15th century Italy. But as we passed the 10 minute mark with no inciting incident, I realized we were in trouble.

Eventually we get it. Leo's friend Lisa's farm has been vandalized. The crops are destroyed. And without them, Lisa's dad can't pay the mortgage and she'll have to be married off to the anemic son of their nobleman landlord.

The film has a little bit of everything: jokes that don't land, phoned-in voice acting, questionable gender stereotypes (girls are described as "moody" and cry to get their way), characters who lack development, painful musical numbers that appear out of nowhere, exposition dumps delivered through dialogue, and a romance that makes Anakin and Padme's in Attack of the Clones look nuanced.

But my favorite thing by far is the closing song. I'll leave you with some of the lyrics:

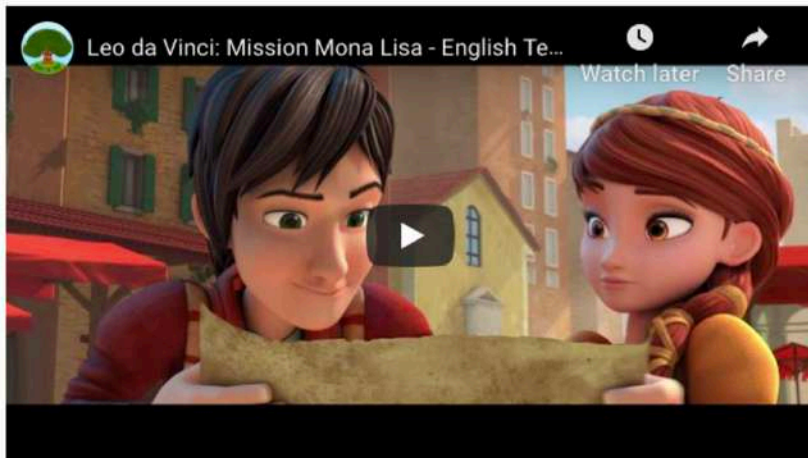

*When I am here with you
I'm a fish inside a creek
And I don't know how to speak
Maybe a mobile phone would help*

Kid says...

I enjoyed it more than the Little Mermaid, but less than Frozen. Leo was my favorite character. He did the fun stuff. Lisa, the girl, was ok. I'd watch it again. It was kind of scary in parts. Why does everything end up a skeleton in this movie?

Big Bald Men and Little Lies in Theaters

It's August, which means Hollywood will cross its fingers and hope audiences will still want to see those films it didn't deem entirely likely for summer blockbuster status. Luckily, strategic indie releases get a little more attention because of the weaker (though certainly muscular) mainstream movies.

The Farewell

by George Wolf

Caught in a lie and feeling desperate?

There's always the Homer Simpson defense ("It takes two to lie - one to lie and one to listen"), or even the George Costanza ("It's not a lie if you believe it").

But with The Farewell, writer/director Lulu Wang finds poignant truths in an elaborate lie, speaking the universal language of "family crazy" while crafting an engaging cultural prism.

Inspired by an episode of the This American Life podcast, The Farewell unfolds through the view of Billi (Awkwafina), a Chinese American who follows her parents back to China after the news of her grandmother Nai Nai's terminal cancer diagnosis.

But Nai Nai (Shuzhen Zhao-priceless) is the only one who doesn't know how sick she is. and the extended family has

Leo Da Vinci: Mission Mona Lisa (kids' review!)

My name is Ashton and I'm 10.

Ok; I admit I was going to give this film two stars and as you can see I gave it four stars by the end. (oh and if you haven't looked at the rating then DO IT NOW!!!) 😊

Lisa's crops burn down on the farm and her friend Leo Da Vinci (Johnny Yong Bosch) and his friend Lorenzo are trying to get enough money for her and her dad to keep the land.

They find a treasure map and go looking for the treasure but pirates want to find it too.

Leo is actually Leonardo Da Vinci who was a famous man who lived in Italy 500 years ago. He painted the Mona Lisa (that's Lisa in the film played by Cherami Leigh) and also invented lots of things.

Mum and I googled a list of the things he invented afterwards as some of them are in the film. I like how he invented amazing things in the film that are actually real.

Something else that is real, now the very talented man/boy (that's me Ashton not Leo) spotted that in the film Da Vinci was LEFT HANDED so we looked it up and he was.

Me!

It's funny and exciting. They were in an abandoned ship underwater and there were skeletons – I don't think it was a scary movie but TRUST me you can scare me with skeletons easily which kind of ruined the point of my comedy review.

I also like how the music was operatic then when people get a bit bored by that it adds a little hint of, well let's just call it "wow factor". And FINALLY springy music at the end! "Yay" and if you are like me you know that music plays a humungous part in film because bad music bad mood, bad mood bad review.

And now I realise my comedy review needs more comedy which brings me on to my next bit which is that one of the pirates was always saying "in all my years of pirating I have never seen..." and then it happens to him!

I don't think the cannon balls were very realistic though because one time they were all landing near Leo with no splash then they fire them later, huge splash.

Agnes aka the moody 5 year old

There was also a little girl (Agnes, played by Faith Graham) who all the way through was acting like one of those moody 5 year olds that think they are 16, then out of the blue at the end she hugs somebody who I am going to be speaking about in a second...

...now there was this kid Niccoló (Landen Beattie) who knew all about the stars, and he was like the nerd of the film I guess? But he knew all about eclipses which turned out to be important. Eventually!

Ok nearly last section but for this one I want to say how they kept twisting the plot around and around and around with who was good and who was bad.

Da Vinci died 500 years ago this year, and I can imagine plenty of children googling him after this, to check out the original Renaissance Man's full invention inventory.

You'll probably find them surfacing hours later, an expert in ball bearings and 16th century robots.

I had no idea he'd invented a diving suit (tested in the past few years and apparently working) – a design that features heavily in this film and allows us to explore gloomy underwater vistas beyond the bright Italian countryside above ground.

There is certainly, pardon the pun, plenty of artistic licence. The young Leonardo (Johnny Yong Bosch) is only a teenager yet has already invented that flying car, and – famously! – painted his friend Lisa.

But basing what is a typical adventure story (and often an old-fashioned one at that) on outlandish near-truth is a clever idea, and one that's sure to grab its young on outlandish near-truth is a clever idea, and one that's sure to grab its young audience.

It's easy to decry animated movies from smaller studios, now we're so used to fare that is witty, big budget, and zeitgeist-aware. Where are the jokes for the parents? The irony? The slight cynicism? These films, aimed directly at children, particularly younger ones, can get lost; and I'm getting to the point where a children's film aimed squarely at them is something to be relished.

Leo Da Vinci may not be a blockbuster (the only name I recognised in it was Leonardo Da Vinci – sorry, cast), and it's not groundbreaking in any way. It is a charming, cheerful tale though, fully aimed at the ten-and-under market.

And while it mostly follows a template, it has that ace up its sleeve in the form of the real Da Vinci's many inventions. They're dotted throughout the film, from a flying car to a rudimentary catapult to a parachute, as young Leo battles pirates for long-lost loot to save his friend.

These escapades are the very definition of my favourite family film classification descriptor, "mild peril". Leo and his friend Lorenzo (Bryce Papenbrook) are friends with local farmer's daughter Lisa (Cherami Leigh), though Leo's liking for her goes rather deeper than mere friendship. But when her father's crops are destroyed in a fire, Leo and Lorenzo promise to go to Florence to find work to repay her father's debts. Without the money Lisa will have to marry the local Marquis, whose bowl haircut is enough to put anybody off, medieval fashion or not.

Leo wants to become apprenticed to an artist, though in the town square he's waylaid by a mysterious storyteller, who has a treasure map for sale. What better use for his new diving suit than to find long-lost riches on a sunken galleon?

He's joined by Lisa; Niccoló, a young astronomer ("you should practice drawing more" he tells Leo, when presented with a cartoon version of the artist's famous Vitruvian Man, a gag which I liked but may be too much for purists); and Agnes, a fierce, independent little girl with no family who seems to simply want some adventure.

The chief pirate is, entirely expectedly, the only frightening one, though I'm not sure where he's meant to be from; generic pirateland presumably. But if his accent meanders, the story doesn't, bouncing merrily in at a brisk 85 minutes.

There are some cute visual gags; I liked the threatening shark Leo encounters on one of his undersea walks, made safe when the inventor shoves the air tube from his diving suit into its toothy mouth so it expands like a balloon, before deflating loudly as it careers backwards into the far distance.

The jokes are amusing rather than rip-roaringly funny, but there's a sense of good-natured geniality throughout the film. The animation is basic but undeniably pretty natured geniality throughout the film. The animation is basic but undeniably pretty, capturing that sometimes arid but still mostly green and floral countryside I remember from Italian holidays in the past (the 1980s, despite my son's suggestion that I might have been a contemporary of Leonardo himself).

Characterisation can be stereotyped, particularly Lisa, who is also underwritten compared to the others: Agnes, Niccolò and Leo have strong identities.

This is a simple adventure tale for younger children, with a bright and breezy approach to its history-based ideas. There's an argument that the film is using Da Vinci's incredible achievements in art and engineering as a shortcut to an interesting story, though overall I feel bringing his inventions to a new, young audience can only be welcome (though if you're not a renaissance expert I'd suggest doing some family research into his achievements before you watch the film – it's a much more interesting watch that way).

Despite the sometimes old-fashioned storytelling, Leo and his friends' success in their quest is based on scientific enquiry, teamwork and technology – less deus ex machina, more actual machines.

There are not many European films distributed in the States: those for children, then, are really a nice exception, something to be proud of

On Friday, August 2, the animated film "Leo da Vinci – Mission Monna Lisa" is released in the States. It is produced by Gruppo Alconi and directed by Sergio Manfio, who is the artistic director of the production company and co-author of the screenplay together with his brother Francesco Manfio, who is also the executive producer of the film, and with the collaboration of Anna Manfio and Davide Stefanato.

The news is important for the film market and the world of Italian culture tout court: it is not often the case that a European or Italian product crosses the ocean and lands in American cinemas. If we think of the world of productions aimed at a family audience, this possibility is even more remote.

At the moment the distributor Ammo Content LLC, based in New York, confirms that the film will be present in 9 American states (but the number is constantly updated): from Denver-Colorado to Yuma-Arizona; from Portland-Oregon to Indianapolis-Indiana; from Portsmouth-Ohio to Houston-Texas... just to name a few of the squares where the adventures of the young Leonardo da Vinci born from the imagination of Gruppo Alconi will arrive. After the big screen, the film will be released on DVD and also on cable and pay TV.

Aimed at a target family, the film mixes adventure and comedy and stars an unreleased adolescent version of Leonardo da Vinci in search of an incredible treasure, against a group of fearsome pirates.

Leonardo da Vinci is a character who has an enormous appeal in every part of the world: this fact, combined with the beauty of the story and the great quality of production of the film, has allowed the distributors of the Treviso-based company to obtain a great consensus in every market in which it has been proposed: to date, agreements have already been defined for distribution in over 60 countries around the world, and in the last year the film has already been released in cinemas in 49 countries, to which the States are now added, to mark a remarkable milestone.

The director, Sergio Manfio: "In designing and producing Leo da Vinci we were aware that the Tuscan genius enjoyed great fame but we didn't think it was so vast and widespread throughout the world. Above all, we are impressed by the success of our young Leo, who has been appreciated precisely because we have not proposed a "little genius" but just We are also happy for the positive opinions we received for the character of Lisa who, despite an adventure set in 1466, turned out to be a modern and real girl.

Francesco Manfio, producer of the film, says: "We are sure that this release in the States will be yet another success. The steps already taken by Leo da Vinci abroad confirm that the choice to concentrate our productions on spreading the culture of our country is a winning one. Obviously, this choice must be accompanied by high quality productions that can be proposed all over the world: I believe that with this feature film productions that can be proposed all over the world: I believe that with this feature film in animation, the goal has been achieved'.

AFTER THE FILM ARRIVES THE TELEVISION SERIES – The success of the feature film was an incentive to speed up the production of the television series (52 episodes of 13 minutes) created by Sergio and Francesco Manfio for Gruppo Alcini. The series is co-produced with Rai ragazzi, the german HR, Cosmos Animation Singapore and All Rights Entertainment, with the contribution of POR – FESR/Regione del Veneto and in collaboration with Trentino Film Commission.

The first 13 episodes of "Leo da Vinci" will be broadcast on Rai Gulp from September 10.

BOX OFFICE SUCCESSES...

When it was released abroad, Leo da Vinci – Mission Monna Lisa had excellent results at the box office.

In particular:

- 2nd place in Slovenia, Serbia and Montenegro
- 3 place in Slovakia
- 4th place in South Korea
- 5th place in Greece
- 9th place in Turkey and Spain

... AND THE PRIZES RECEIVED

In 2018 Sergio Manfio, the film's director, won the Premio Cinema Veneto Leone di Vetro "...for showing once again the production excellence of Gruppo Alcini...".

At the latest ICFF (Italian Contemporary Film Festival) held in Toronto, dedicated to productions aimed at the 8-18 year-old target, the film by Gruppo Alcini received the prestigious ICFF Youth Film Festival People's Choice Award.

The Festival Director: "Leo da Vinci was the winning ace among all the films presented and was seen by more than 5,000 enthusiastic viewers. Leo has been screened more than any other film, even at the express request of the various schools that participated in the festival and several teachers have enriched the experience of the festival."

WHAT PARENTS NEED TO KNOW

Parents need to know that Leo Da Vinci: Mission Mona Lisa is an animated adventure that portrays the famous painter/inventor as a young adult. Da Vinci (voiced by Johnny Yong Bosch) uses his genius to help his crush get money after her family's farm is destroyed (their romance, including a kiss, is part of the story). Since this is a historical piece, young children may not understand that contraptions like a cart that moves itself, a primitive plane, a parachute, and an underwater breathing apparatus

New to Theatres This Weekend: Fast & Furious Presents: Hobbs & Shaw, The Nightingale

Posted by Sean on August 2nd, 2019 Filed under: New Releases

The last of the major summer blockbusters arrives in theatres this weekend as Fast & Furious Presents: Hobbs & Shaw kicks off the month of August. Although the franchise has historically been a huge money maker, particularly overseas, expectations are quite a bit lower because due to the fact that this is merely a spin-off. Can Dwayne Johnson and Jason Statham carry this one alone? In select theatres, IFC Films will also release the latest film from The Babadook director Jennifer Kent, an intense period thriller called The Nightingale. Meanwhile Neon is releasing the Sundance hit Luce starring Naomi Watts and Octavia

Spencer. On top of that, it will be interesting to see how Quentin Tarantino's Once Upon a Time in Hollywood holds up in its second weekend. What will you be watching this weekend?

Leo Da Vinci: Mission Mona Lisa (2019)

Leo Da Vinci: Mission Mona Lisa is an animated adventure aimed at young kids that isn't half bad for adults.

The plot of the film has teenage inventor Leo Da Vinci and his friends Lorenzo and Lisa trying to get the money to pay the rent/taxes for Mona's family after the crops are destroyed. If they can't get the money Lisa will be forced to marry the young lord who owns the property and she despises. Hearing the story of a lost treasure the trio set off to find it using Leo's inventions to help them. Of course nothing goes smoothly, the end up with two kids (Niccolo and Agnes) in tow and they run into various dangers including a band of pirates.

For the most part Mission Mona Lisa is a pretty good adventure tale. Moving at a good clip we are carried along from start to finish thanks to some good characters and some nice unexpected moments. As an adult, I knew how this was going to go, but at the same time I never let that bother me simply because the film was never meant for me. This is the sort of film that's aimed at the smaller set and as a kids film this is something they are going to eat up.

Actually the one thing that bothers me about the film is that it has a good enough story at its center that if they hadn't felt the need to aim for the under 10 set this actually would have made for a solid adventure film with no reservations. (Hell it gloriously tends to stay away from all the typical Disney/Pixar tropes and sweetness) While the two small waifs Leo, Lisa and Lorenzo pick up along the way are funny and entertaining, they really aren't needed for the story, which shifts from time to time to bring them front and center. Yea, the kids work and provide laughs but their inclusion is kind of out of place and I kept thinking if they weren't such an obvious effort to give the little kids someone to identify with this would have been better.

the little kids someone to identify with this would have been better.

Don't get me wrong Mission Mona Lisa isn't a bad film, and my comments aren't supposed to make you think that. Rather I'm trying to point out that if the filmmakers had just told the story of three friends and didn't play down to the little folk this would have been a great film instead of just a good one.

Regardless of my quibbles this is an unexpected find of a film. And I think that if you have kids this is definitely worth a look if for no other reason than it isn't stereotypical sweetness.

Leo Da Vinci: Mission Mona Lisa is playing in select theaters across America.

Leo Da Vinci: Mission Mona Lisa

— Leo and Lorenzo are sky high.

(2018) Animated Feature (Ammo Content) Starring the voices of Johnny Bosch, Cherami Leigh, Bryce Papenbrook, Faith Graham, Landen Beattie, Michael Sorich, Keith Silverstein, Jamieson Price, Darrel Guilbeau, Tom Fahn, Kyle McCarley, Tony Azzolino, Katie McGovern. Directed by Sergio Manfio

From a video content standpoint, we live in an age of too many choices and things are only going to get worse in that regard. With literally dozens of streaming outlets all clamoring for content with more and more being added all the time, it leads to an embarrassment of riches when you think about the wonderful movies and shows that are available these days but that also means, conversely, that there is also an awful lot of dreck out there.

This Italian CGI film, which is a fictionalized account of a young Leonardo da Vinci as his restless intellect and imagination are leading to some fantastic and sometimes bizarre inventions, falls somewhere in between wonderful and awful. Leo (Bosch) lives in a small village in the 15th century as Europe is moving out of the Dark Ages and into the light of the Renaissance. He hangs out with his pal Lorenzo (Papenbrook) and Lisa (Leigh) whom he has a secret crush on – one that everybody knows about.

While showing off his latest inventions – a vehicle called the Barrel that is a combination roadster, paddlewheel boat and ornithopter as well as a prototype diving suit – Lisa's farm burns down, leaving her father (Sorich) in a precarious financial position. In fact, if something isn't done, Lisa will be forced to marry the foppish and despicable son of the landowner whom Lisa's father rents his land from. Determined to not let that happen, Leo heads off to Florence with Lisa and Lorenzo – only Lorenzo doesn't show. He has a really good excuse, though – he's been kidnapped by pirates.

Once in Florence, Leo learns of the location of a lost treasure. Aided by little pickpocket Agnes (Graham), who refers to herself in the third person, and the extremely polite little inventor Niccolo (Beattie), Leo and Lisa locate the treasure. However, they are unaware that there are pirates seeking the same treasure and who will stop at nothing to get it.

This is very definitely meant to be a video babysitter for your young 'uns, particularly those in the six to eight-year-old range. The colors are bright and cheerful, there is no objectionable content here and while the history might be fudged somewhat as well as little details – Lisa is depicted as wearing a kind of yoga pants and while very modern, back in the 15th century it was considered a sin for women to wear trousers so it would have been skirts for Lisa. Children might also be distracted (if they bother to notice) that the dialogue doesn't match the movement of the character's mouths but this was originally in Italian.

The story is full of adventure and intrigue and even a little science (Niccolò explains how eclipses work). There are also some godawful songs that even the kids won't sing. It's kind of bizarre hearing a 15th century character singing about bicycles and mobile phones, things not available back then. There are some friendly dolphins and a trio of sharks straight out of Finding Nemo. There's even some references to the real Da Vinci's later work. And did I mention pirates? To quote Fred Savage from The Princess Bride, "Pirates are good." Even the ones with excessive blue eye shadow.

REASONS TO SEE: The backgrounds are lush and beautiful.

REASONS TO AVOID: The human characters are a bit wooden and expressionless.

FAMILY VALUES: There is a little bit of rude humor and situations of peril.

TRIVIAL PURSUIT: The film is based on an Italian animated television series on da Vinci.

CRITICAL MASS: As of 8/5/19; Rotten Tomatoes: 33% positive reviews; Metacritic: No score yet.

FINAL RATING: 6/10

Leonardo "Leo" Da Vinci is an inventor who is struggling with his newfound things. He has been wanting to create a flying machine which works at times but has its issues. When he introduced friend Lisa to the machine, it couldn't have come at a worse time. During their adventure, Lisa's father lost all of his harvest in a fire and cannot afford to pay back the bank to keep his land. Taking the blame for not being there, Leo decides to do what it takes to make up to Lisa.

Leo and Lisa head to Florence, where he is supposed to go become an apprentice to a master artist. However, he learns that the artist is currently out of town. The duo decides to make the most of it, until they learn of a treasure that could be the key to helping Lisa with Leo finding the map and joined by two youngsters, Niccolo and Agnes. However, a pirate has learned of Leo having the map and will do what it takes to get his hands on the treasure.

Bringing a legend in animation form can be tricky. It can be even trickier when it comes to having a young version of that legend to animation form because it soon learns the filmmakers to think what route to go. Should they follow history or make something fun out of it with a fun adventure and bring some fantasy to it. In terms of the filmmakers here, they rely on the latter and this is actually quite a fun family adventure.

The film revolves around a teenage version of Leonardo da Vinci, who at the time is heavily into inventions. Of course, the film theorizes on the fantasy that before his prolific and iconic career as an artist, da Vinci invented flying (although the Wright Brothers are the creators of the first real airplane). Perhaps inspired by the classic Steven Spielberg/Richard Donner collaboration The Goonies, the film has some of the same thematic element, which involves the heroes attempting to find a treasure in order to save someone's land. Of course, there is plenty of fun and hijinks along the way as we see Leo and Lisa team up with young kids Niccolo and Agnes, the latter two who tend to bring out the best in terms of being smartalecks while it is clear Leo has some sort of romantic feelings towards Lisa, hence his reasoning for helping her.

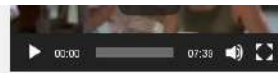

The film does take some darkness in terms of the pirates who are wanting the treasure for themselves. It seems first as if the mission is from some sort of prophecy. And there are some fun twists as aside from flying, the viewer is led to believe that da Vinci invented scuba gear as we seen him underwater in a full suit in one scene. There is quite a nice twist to the story towards the end and with a voice cast including iconic voice actors such as former Power Ranger Johnny Yong Bosch (as the titular Leo) and Bryce Papenbrook (as Leo's BFF Lorenzo), the voice acting just makes this more fun to watch.

Leo Da Vinci: Mission Mona Lisa is a fun family adventure that melds the legend with elements of Around the World in 80 Days and The Goonies, with an excellent voice cast who make this an overall fun family film.
